

Family Owned Since 1952

Burgermaster restaurants are the life's work of founder Phil Jensen. In 1952, he was in his early thirties and had just lost the lease on his restaurant in downtown Seattle. He was approached by two brothers, Don and Bud Mowat, who were looking for someone to start a restaurant on a property they owned near the University of Washington. They offered the lease to Phil, and the rest, as they say, is history. Phil attributed much of his success to that first opportunity given him by the Mowat brothers.

Continuing Phil's legacy, our guiding principle is to "give the customer a better deal". We use Phil's hands-on attention to detail and focus on quality which has made Burgermaster a landmark in the greater Seattle area. Phil truly enjoyed the business he had created and worked every day up until a month before he died, at 88, in October 2009.

Mary Jensen, Phil's wife for more than 60 years, helped him grow his business. A lifelong gardener, Mary still oversees the planting and maintenance of the landscaping for which Burgermaster is also known. Visit one of our restaurants when the tulips are in bloom to get an idea of just how different and how special a place Burgermaster restaurant is. The Burgermaster located in the Bellevue-Kirkland area has received several awards from local gardening clubs.

Since that first location, the Burgermaster has expanded to six locations, from Seattle to Mount Vernon and employs over 150. All of Phil and Mary's four children and several grandchildren are involved in Burgermaster—it's definitely a family business.
